The Oxford Handbook of Propaganda Studies

I argue that Bembo merged Venetian mythology with ancient rhetoric in a way that made one particular meaning of decorum - that of moderation - the all-embracing, universal principle of his stylistics; and further, that this principle functioned as an inseparable corollary of variazione, calling the latter into service as a means of tempering extremes in order to avoid too intense an emphasis on any one style or affect. The definition reflects the fact that facilities are typically staffed by youth workers who prioritise a supportive relationship with young people as a means to promote young people's psychosocial development.
